Warrior–Monk Line System

The system consists of a line of people arranged from right to left. Each person is either a Warrior (W) or a Monk (M). The line must initially begin and end with a warrior. Initially, every warrior starts with exactly one permanent intent to kill.

Daily Simulation

Each day consists of two phases:
1. Shooting Phase
2. Devil Phase

Rule 1 — Shooting Direction

Each person may only shoot the person immediately to their left.

Rule 2 — Maximum Shots Per Day

A person may shoot at most twice during a single day, even if they possess more than two intents.

Rule 3 — Warrior Gains Intent When Shot

If a warrior is shot once, their intents increase by 1. If shot twice, their intents increase by 2.

Rule 4 — Monk Hit Once

If a monk is shot once, the monk becomes a warrior with zero intents.

Rule 5 — Monk Hit Twice

If a monk is shot twice during the same day:
• First shot: M $\rightarrow$ warrior with 0 intents
• Second shot: warrior with 0 intents $\rightarrow$ warrior with 1 temporary intent

Rule 6 — Warrior Spending Intents

After a warrior shoots:
• If they used exactly two shots and now have zero intents remaining, they become a monk.
• Otherwise they remain a warrior.

Rule 7 — Temporary Intent

A warrior created from a monk receiving two shots gains one temporary intent. That warrior is forced to spend that intent when their turn arrives. After spending that single temporary intent, they immediately become a monk again.

Rule 8 — Single Shot Extension

If a warrior wants to shoot but nobody exists to their left, the devil appends a monk so the shot may occur.

Rule 9 — Double Shot Extension

If a warrior has two shots remaining at the end of the line, the devil appends monks as necessary so all pending shots are resolved.

Rule 10 — Dragging to Hell

After all shooting is complete, the devil starts from the rightmost side of the line and drags every consecutive warrior into hell until the first monk is reached.

Rule 11 — Converting the Stopping Monk

The monk where the devil stops becomes a warrior with one permanent intent.

Rule 12 — Whispering

For all remaining people further left:
• temporary intents become permanent
• warriors keep their current intents

Termination Condition

The simulation ends once the devil finds no monk during cleanup. At that point the entire remaining population is dragged into hell.
